Chapter 1 by Makayla

It was a dark and gloomy outside. The rain was falling at a steady rhythm. Drop.Drop.Drop. against the window where Ali worked. looking at the time on the computer she put on her coat and scurried outside hoping she didn't miss her bus.

As she was crossing the street she saw the bus speed right past her.

"Damn," she cursed under her breath.

Chapter 2 by M

It would be another half an hour before the next one, she thought. Ali felt a twinge of annoyance as she watched the silver bus lazily climb the adjacent hill.

"I can't be late today," she whispered to herself as she searched the street for a taxi.

Black car. blue car. Gray car. But not a taxi in sight.

Wasting no time, she began walking down the street, taking small steps to avoid slipping. She opened her umbrella and let it rest on her left shoulder. The umbrella was far too large for her, but at least it kept her dry.

As she walked, rain brought calm to her senses, masking the sounds of the streets around her. Taking a deep breath, she realized how anxious her appointment made her.
